Abstract

Ayn with (Hamza) of the Sounds of Glottal Stop substitution a study in the light of Modern Philology

Substitution of sounds such as substitution of glottal stop with ayn is common in Arabic linguistic lore, especially in the languages of Tameem, Qais and Asad among many others. It is called aynization (<an<anat) of Tamim, as is acknowledged by modern and classic linguists. However, the substitution of ayn with a glottal stop seems strange and problematic. Therefore, this study aims at tracing the linguistic examples of substitution of the glottal stop with ayn and vice versa. Since the second kind is debunked by many modern and classic linguists, this study is concerned with emphasizing such a kind of substitution, as is supported by many classic linguists.

Keywords: Substitution, substitution of a glottal stop with ayn, the substitution of ayn with a glottal stop.

Keywords: Substitution, substitution of glottal stop with ayn, the substitution of ayn with a glottal stop.
