Abstract,

Imaging The Social Life Of Arab in Al-Khaleel Bin Ahmed Al-Faraheed's book 'Al-Ain'

This paper addresses the idea of "social lexicalization" in Al-Khaleel Bin Ahmed Al-Faraheed's book 'Al-Ain'. Al-Faraheedhi has exceeded the linguistic knowledge to that of the social knowledge in all its perspectives. The paper is designed to track the methodology that Al-Khaleel has adopted in illuminating the image of the Arab life in the Second Hijri Century and the earlier eras, where his way of conducting the Arabic meaning was descriptive. It was clear that his way of conducting of the Arabic lexicons portrays the Arabic life precisely.

His study reflects the traditions, values, behaviours, thoughts, and beliefs. He described their life in war and peace, agriculture and pasturage, sailing and hunting, his doings and movements, dress, drinks and foods.

Confining the scope of the study to the social life derives from the fact that language in itself is a social phenomenon and one of the social features. Language is thus the best way of reflecting the mentality of people, and thus is collectively agreed upon by all earlier and modern grammarians.

Key words: lexicalization, social life, Al-Faraheedhi, Al-Ain' book
