Abstract

This thesis deals with accusative nouns, which their grammatical case is attributed to the deletion of preceding prepositions. It deals with some aspects of objects, adverbs of place and time, adverbs of distinction, infinitives and oath constructions

It has been found out that the accusative case attributed to this kind of deletion does not denote any syntactic function. It had only been envisaged by ancient grammarians as an un verbal governor .

This thesis deals with such instances of accusatives in Arabic as the result of historical change which transferred verbs from intransitivity to transitivity or stylistic variations.
